INFANTS:

Reading a book to your infant is a great chance to cuddle and bond, relax and sit comfortably with your baby on your lap. Point out pictures on the page and name what you are pointing to. You don't have to read every word! Sharing a book is an experience that helps your baby's brain to make important connections, laying the foundation for learning to read. Just because your baby is not talking, doesn't mean he/she isn't learning!

TODDLERS:

Have lots of fun with the book! It provides lots of opportunities to learn about animal names and colors. The book can also have a chanting or sing-song sound to it making it easier for toddlers to memorize and repeat. You can ask your toddler to point to the different animals on the page as you read to them. Point to the words as you read them. This helps your toddler learn what words are and where the words you are saying come from.

PRESCHOOLERS:

Brown Bear, Brown Bear, What Do You See? is a classic and sure to become a favorite! Continue pointing to the words as you read. Take turns "reading" and help your child use the pictures as clues to the words on the page. Preschoolers like to recite parts of a familiar story, especially if the story is predictable. Pause at the end of a sentence and let your child finish with the words they remember. Look around the room and point out things that are the same color as the animal you are reading about, or retell the story with stuffed animals that are different colors.

Your lap is still the best place for your preschooler to be and the reading you are sharing is helping your child to become a reader!
